For young learners (Grades 4 to 7)

1. General Currie was the first Canadian-born soldier to do what?
2. Draw a timeline that showcases Currie's career.
3. Using at least two examples, explain why General Currie's appointment to command the Canadian Corps was significant.
4. General Currie died in 1933. Thousands of Canadians watched his funerary procession in Montreal or listened to it over the radio (see this YouTube clip). What does this suggest about his public image and how Canadian's viewed his legacy after the First World War?

For advanced learners (Grade 8 and up)

5. General Currie has a complicated legacy. Conduct research regarding Currie's military career, his money scandal, his libel trial with Sam Hughes, and his post-war service. Arrange your research and thoughts in a mind-map.
6. Select one of the major battles Currie was involved in. Research the battle and write a paragraph describing Currie's involvement and his actions. Be sure to contextualize why your selected battle was important in the First World War.
